INTRODUCTION

Indonesian society is currently undergoing fundamental changes in their daily life, culture, politics, economy, defense, and social life, as a result of globalization, undergoing a process of transformation, which has far-reaching and influential consequences based on national life that almost affects all aspects of life that are faced with significant problems at the international, national and regional levels. The current millennial generation influences the new millennial leadership style a lot. Millennials now hold the country's development as a link in the growth and development of the country because each generation will change and age into the millennial generation, which is the key to holding a country in the future. The character of the leader in the colonial period was formed from the struggle against the invaders. The leaders of the nation struggle to create new knowledge and have ideals that then produce the points and guidelines for the journey and life of formulating the ideology of the State. Therefore, leadership education is needed to educate and develop the potential of the younger generation to build leader character so that they can become individuals who have a leadership spirit and are beneficial to themselves and their environment

REVIEW

Education is defined as the learning of knowledge, skills, and habits of a group of people that are passed down from one generation to the next through teaching, training, or research. Education usually begins at birth and lasts a lifetime. Education can be started before birth, such as playing music and reading to the unborn baby, hoping that he can teach his baby before birth. And leaders are agents of change, people whose behavior will influence others more than the behavior of others will suggest to them. Leadership traits must be developed independently because these traits differ from person to person. The awareness that self-chosen leadership abilities will help make improvements because personality will affect leadership behavior. The best way to practice skills is to identify opportunities to demonstrate leadership skills in day-to-day activities, organizations, or other programs. To become the most influential leaders, they need to adapt their leadership style to the situation. Suppose that leaders have limitations in their ability to update their basic personality and leadership style. In this case, the problem must be changed, or a leader must be chosen whose style is in sync with the existing situation. A good leader in the youth and future generations is a challenge for future leaders. However, finding the perfect leader for the present and the future is a challenge that this nation must face. Leaders must adapt to the times because developed countries have leaders who successfully take advantage of technological developments that change the pattern of human life. In addition, leaders must also have high empathy & commitment to help others regardless of ethnicity, religion, or race.

The main chain in a country's development is the task of the Millennial Generation. Because a key to leadership will be continued by the millennial generation. Millennials are the demographic group after Gen-X. The millennial generation is a state asset as a potential leader of this country, be it state leaders, organizational leaders, company leaders, and even become leaders for themselves. For leaders, an excellent lesson experiences, learning so that in the future, the young generation can make their occasion a material consideration for taking action in the future. In the current era of globalization, the nature of the millennial generation is a concern because it no longer has a high leadership spirit.

However, millennials often forget that they are destroying state assets by doing useless things such as drugs, promiscuity, and others. Therefore, it is important for the current millennial generation to apply leadership characteristics so that each of them can become a quality leader in the future. The way to foster a sense of leadership for a quality millennial generation is first to have high self-confidence to become a significant asset as a leader. Logically, if we do not have increased self-confidence, then others have no basis for trusting us. Second, being a leader requires extensive knowledge, ranging from team management, excellent and effective communication, lobbying techniques, problem-solving, and understanding of the area to be addressed. We can receive extensive knowledge by reading, attending training, learning, and consulting with experts. The three of them dared to express the aspirations that we wanted to convey. To become a millennial leader, you don't need to be afraid of being criticized because people have different suggestions and criticisms. Then never be scared to start something that has never been done because everyone will know failure when trying to do a process, so we see success when we have attempted to through that process. The three of them dared to express the aspirations that we wanted to convey. Leadership in the Millennial Era is the answer to the challenges leaders face. These challenges have actually been very often discussed and even become essential issues for the sustainability of a development. Millennials are the next generation of power leadership. Suppose most, or all of this Millennial generation can perform optimally. In this case, of course, development and development will very quickly reach and even exceed the target of a country. As a result, the government is able to grow sustainably and be able to compete in the competition of countries. On the other hand, if these millennials fail to provide quality leadership, wrong development, & deviation from the set targets, or in other words, poor leadership,

In this era, Millennials are leaders who make changes and challenges for the country. But a good leader must also have honesty, integrity, and loyalty for the interests of the people. A leader must be honest in himself and may not prioritize personal, group, or party interests above the people he leads. In addition, leaders in the millennial era must be able to know about technological advances and utilize them efficiently and effectively to present work processes in their work environment. Furthermore, someone who is agile and can look for opportunities is a leader who can facilitate the change of Generation X and Y leaders in Generation Z to achieve the expected performance that is able and willing to contribute. More importantly, they remain committed to continuing to excel and grow with the company career place. And quick to adapt can be called a tangka leader.

The book on Leadership Education in the Millennial Era has met the needs of readers because it can be seen from the contents of this book that it meets the reader's criteria, especially the Millennial Generation, it can also be read by lecturers, teachers, education staff, students and people who care about education and this book is also good. To be read and become a reference for job seekers and employees. The book also explains in detail starting from the definition of education, level of education, how to become a leader, what characters must be mastered, and the model of the new millennial generation leader.

In terms of the impact of this book on readers, this book has a positive impact on readers because, in addition to being able to grow the spirit of leadership, this book also adds insight into how the latest leadership model for the millennial generation is, how to become the character, traits, and behavior of millennial leaders. In the explanation of the book, also explores several definitions of education, working time, organization, and others, which can be used as references by teaching staff

After reading this book, it is hoped that the readers will be able to understand the importance of education and their role as leader in Republic of Indonesia. By understanding how to become a millennial leader and have a leadership spirit, it is hoped that readers can also apply new model theories, new characters, which a leader must have to produce quality millennial generation leaders.

This In accordance with the title of the book on leadership education in the Millennial Era provides more knowledge about leadership education for millennials, teachers, lecturers, and other teaching staff. This book also has a positive impact on readers because there are reviews about how to become a true leader and the character of a leader. This can be proven in the contents of the book, which reads, "In the end, an effective government will be realized if the leaders of this republic meet the qualifications as leaders who are credible, have the ability, intelligence, and distant vision. But a good leader must also have integrity, honesty, loyalty for the benefit of the people

This book is inspiring because it contains explanations from various sources such as "Martinus Jan Langeveld, Ki Hajar Dewantara, Ahmad D. Marimba. The whole book is perfect and convincing. The reason is, this book also provides characters and examples of leaders in the colonial period.

Era, the 21st century, to modern times like now, and there are also leadership models from various nations such as Europe and America

Leadership education is reviewed in several chapters. Chapter one examines the notion of education, leadership education, and also the understanding of the millennial generation. The application of Leadership Education is located in Chapter 2, where Chapter 2 discusses How to Cultivate a Sense of Leadership in Millennial Generation, Leadership in the Millennial Era. , Leadership Characters in the Millennial Era, Leadership Challenges in the Millennial Era, located on Pages 31-44.

This book has a style, arrangement, and book size that suits the target audience, especially the millennial generation, but is related to reviews. The contents of the book are also suitable for reading by lecturers, teachers, and teaching staff. And this book was also written by three authors. Those who have published books before so they already have many references for the contents of the book. This book aims to understand leadership in the Millennial Era and for teachers such as lecturers, teachers, and teaching staff; it can be used as a teaching reference for students and students to support the spirit of leadership for the millennial generation.

For the study of facts and ideas, nothing is overlooked. The author has explained in detail the leadership education in the millennial era, starting from a basic understanding of education, leadership education, millennial generation from the views of various scientific figures to more details about the character and model of leaders from time to time.

The advantage of this book is that the writing is very detailed and detailed in each chapter so that the reader feels very helpful with every explanation in the book. Moreover, this book provides an overview of various figures as well as a basic understanding of education, etc. This book is also equipped with innovative innovations to be a role model for millennial generation leaders.

The weakness of this book is the writing of punctuation marks such as spaces, periods, commas, for words, there are wrong words (typing) and foreign words that are not italicized.

My advice as a book reviewer is punctuation spaces periods colons as in the sentence "Thus, the success of development has produced a double effect a nation that is getting smarter and the attitude of community criticism is increasing". In the sentence, there is a colon punctuation error (:) it says: "double effect: nation, there are words that are not right as "Gesellschaft" There are additional letters that are wrongly used in a foreign language, making the reader confused, it should be "Gesellschaft" which means association/community .The word is improved to make it easier for readers to understand, especially the millennial generation, to make it more exciting and not easily bored. Using unfamiliar words can be skewe,such as "Give Limited Alternatives and Referrals, Provide feedback, Modify Ideas, etc
