

Introduction

James Clark Maxwell predicted electro-magnetic waves theoretically in the 1860ies and Heinrich Hertz confirmed their existence by his experiments in 1887. At the same time, attempts began by Ferdinand Braun, Schneider (EK4ABM), Marconi and others to use and commercialize radio waves for wireless communication. The discovery of wireless sparked the interest of radio enthusiasts, mostly teenagers, who started –in the US already around 1905– to experiment with simple receivers and sometimes powerful transmitters for contacting each other [Wiegand, 1908]. This activity was referred to as Amateur Radio (or, for obscure reasons, Ham Radio), to distinguish it from commercial two-way radio services of the military, on ships, etc, which slowly began to emerge around 1912. Although only a small fraction of the population participated in amateur radio, it was essential in the development of radio technology and in the education of engineers and scientists.

The biggest societal influence of amateur radio was the invention of broadcast, which soon became independent. After WWI, governments started to install and run big transmitters to broadcast scheduled content, like news and entertainment. In Germany, broadcast was promoted by Hans Bredow (1879-1959, Founding director of the Department for Wireless Telegraphy in the Reichspostministerium since 1919, ousted by the NS government in February 1933) and Eugen Nesper (1879-1961, Founder of the Deutscher Radio-Klub e. V. in 1923), leading 1923 to the first broadcast station in Berlin. Broadcast, accessible with modest commercially produced radio receivers, quickly attracted millions.

After WWI, radio amateurs were restricted by international treaties to wavelengths shorter than 200m, which were considered useless by commercial and governmental services. The restriction turned out to be advantageous, as radio amateurs discovered 1921/1922 that these short wavelengths enabled worldwide communication with moderate antenna size and transmitting power [De Soto, 1936]. The discovery made amateur radio a worldwide community that attracted people across different layers of society and enabled their education. Following the example of the American Radio Relay League in the United States, radio amateurs in Europe started around 1923 to broadly organize radio clubs and publish amateur radio journals. Maybe the first instance of a maker movement, these activities broadly established a technical culture, which not only enabled participation in amateur radio, but also helped create the vibrant industrial and scientific development during the 1920ies and 30ies in many countries [Haring, 2006].

In most countries, Amateur Radio was legally permitted to citizens that underwent an exam, proving their technical and operational abilities, to obtain an amateur radio license. Not so in Germany. The period from 1923 to 1933 during the Weimar Republic has been referred to as the “romantic period” of Amateur Radio in Germany. It was also considered a dire period, because, under the Prussian Telegraph Law from 1892, amateur radio was simply “verboten”. The only legal activity was reception of radio signals, which still required a permit, the “Audionversuchserlaubnis” [K]. The name of the largest German amateur radio club, Deutscher Amateur Sende Dienst (DASD), had transmission in its name, but for most members this was just a dream. Starting in 1925, there were a few exceptions, official transmission licenses with callsigns KA0-KZ3 were issued to some clubs, companies, and educational institutions (Pre-1927 official “lis” calls). These official callsigns were converted in 1927 to EK4xxx, in 1929 to D4xxx. But most private citizens who wanted to actively participate in amateur radio had to work around the law. The DASD designed in 1927 a system for unofficial callsigns, of the form EK4xx, in which the first letter of the suffix encoded region. In 1929 these calls were converted to D4xx callsigns. To blend in with official callsigns the DASD designed in 1930 a system to convert D4xx calls into unofficial D4xxx callsigns. The unofficial stations sent out anonymous QSL cards (see some examples below) and could not be found in amateur radio callbooks.

Because “unlis” operations had to be clandestine, the operators behind most unofficial call signs have been a mystery. This is the first comprehensive attempt to identify and compile “unlis” holders of German call signs used in the period from 1923 to 1933, in some cases to later. Beginning with 34 “lis” licenses on May 15, 1933 [CQ-MB 8/1933], the Nazi regime started to issue official “lis” licenses. We hope that this listing can shed some light on a chapter of amateur radio, which for many reasons, has remained in the shadow. We added here and there a bit of biographical information, which allows some glimpses how amateur radio during the Weimar Republic influenced history and, in turn, was affected by history:

- 1) Some operators later became scientists or leading technology developers, for example: EK4AAL, EK4AAR, EK4ABM, EK4ACI, EK4AV, EK4CM, EK4GP, EK4LV, EK4VF, EK4XU, D4TBM
- 2) Some were involved in intelligence activities: EK4AB: Abwehr, later BND - Organisation Gehlen; EK4KQF: BND; EK4KU: BND; EK4TH: Abwehr agent in Mexico; EK4TY: Abwehr agent in Argentina; EK4XF: hired by CIA, then inactive; D4OMO: hired by CIA; EK4HH(2): MfS Referatsleiter in the GDR.
- 3) Some became victims/refugees of the Nazi dictatorship that ended the Weimar Republic: Kc2, EK4ABK(2), EK4ACZ, EK4AG, EK4AH(1), EK4CL, EK4CM, EK4JB, EK4QV(1), EK4QY(1), EK4SAR(1), EK4YAE, D4EWV, D4FLA, D4ZGM, UN7DD
- 4) Holders of about 6% of active EK calls remain unknown: Wanted: EK4AX, DA, DC, DD, DN, DV, FG, GQ, HA, HF, HP, IL, MC, MQ, NB, NI, NU, NW, NX, NZ, OJ, OR, OS, OY, QD, QM, QN, QO, RL, RP, RQ, RZ, SL, TG, UT, VO, VW, XA, XC, XG, XL, XW, XX, YA, YT, YW, YZ, ZA, ZZ

In spite of the gaps and inaccuracies in this compilation, we hope that it is still helpful information for those interested in a quite unexplored chapter of amateur radio history. Maybe this can even inspire some to continue the investigations. Please help to make this list better, send corrections and additional information with sources to k6ee@arrl.net.

Einführung

James Clark Maxwell sagte um 1860 die Möglichkeit elektromagnetischen Wellen voraus und Heinrich Hertz bestätigte 1887 die Existenz solcher Wellen durch seine Laborexperimente. Fast gleichzeitig begannen Versuche von Ferdinand Braun, Schneider (EK4ABM), Marconi und anderen, Radiowellen für Kommunikation zu nutzen und zu kommerzialisieren. Radiowellen übten eine magische Faszination auf eine breite Bevölkerungsschicht aus. Vor allem junge Leute begannen bald darauf, in USA schon um 1905, mit einfachen Empfängern und teils leistungsstarken Sendern zu experimentieren und miteinander in Kontakt zu treten [Wiegand, 1908]. Diese Aktivität wurde als Amateurfunk (Amateur Radio) bezeichnet, um von kommerziellen Funkdiensten in Militär und auf Schiffen zu unterscheiden, die in USA etwa um 1912 ihre Arbeit begannen. Obwohl nur ein kleiner Anteil der Bevölkerung am Amateurfunk partizipierte, spielte dieser dennoch eine wichtige Rolle bei der Entwicklung von Radiotechnik und für die Ausbildung von Ingenieuren und Wissenschaftlern.

Der wohl größte gesellschaftliche Beitrag des Amateurfunks war die Erfindung des Rundfunks, der sich bald verselbständigte. Nach dem ersten Weltkrieg begannen Regierungen grosse Sender zu installieren und betreiben, die nach einem Sendeplan Nachrichten und Unterhaltung boten. In Deutschland wurde der Rundfunk von Hans Bredow (1879-1959, Gründungsdirektor der Abteilung für drahtlose Telegraphie im Reichspostministerium seit 1919, 1933 abgesetzt vom NS Regime) und Eugen Nesper (1879-1961, Gründer des Deutschen Radio-Klub e. V., 1923) eingeführt. Die erste deutsche Rundfunkstation ging 1923 in Berlin in Betrieb. Rundfunk, der mit kleinen, bald kommerziell gefertigten Empfängern zu hören war, zog in kurzer Zeit ein Millionenpublikum an.

Nach dem ersten Weltkrieg wurde den Funkamateuren in internationalen Verträgen lediglich Bänder mit Wellenlängen unter 200 Meter zugeteilt, welche als nutzlos angesehen wurden - kommerzielle Funkdienste und Rundfunk durften längere Wellen benutzen. Die Amateure machten aus der Not eine Tugend, sie entdeckten 1921/22, dass auf den ihnen zugeteilten Frequenzen weltumspannende Verbindungen mit relativ kleinen Sendern und Antennen möglich sind [De Soto, 1936]. Amateurfunk wurde nun eine weltumspannende Gemeinschaft und zog Bürger aus unterschiedlichsten Gesellschaftsschichten an. Dem Beispiel des amerikanischen Vereins "American Radio Relay League" folgend, wurden in Europa um 1923 zahlreiche Radiovereine und Funkzeitschriften gegründet. Diese Aktivitäten brachten technisches Wissen in der Bevölkerung, welches für die Teilnahme am Amateurfunk unabdingbar war und darüber hinaus eine technische Kultur etablierte, welche die rasante Entwicklung der Industrieländer in den 20iger und 30iger Jahren mit ermöglichte [Haring, 2006].

In den meisten Ländern war es per Gesetz erlaubt, nach dem Absolvieren einer Prüfung in Funktechnik, Gesetzen und Telegraphie, eine Amateurfunkstation zu betreiben. Nach bestandener Prüfung erhielt der Kandidat von den Behörden ein Rufzeichen, eine Kennung, die im Funkverkehr zu benutzen war. Nicht so in Deutschland. Die Zeit von 1923-1933 während der Weimarer Republik wird manchmal als die romantische Periode des Amateurfunks in Deutschland bezeichnet. Zutreffender ist es wohl, diese Periode elend zu nennen, denn unter dem Preussischen Telegraphiegesetz von 1892, das immer noch galt, war Amateurfunk schlichtweg verboten. Die einzige legale Aktivität war der Empfang, und sogar dieser war staatlich reglementiert, es war eine Genehmigung, die Audionversuchserlaubnis erforderlich [K]. Daher blieb das "Senden" im Namen des größten Amateurfunkklubs, des Deutscher Amateur Sende Dienst (DASD) für die meisten Mitglieder nur ein Traum. Um 1925 gab es einige Ausnahmen, es wurden einige wenige Sendelizenzen and Klubs, Betriebe und einige Universitätsinstitute vergeben. Die ursprünglichen Rufzeichen Ka0-Kz9 wurden 1927 umgewandelt zu EK4xxx, und in 1929 zu D4xxx. Aber der Großteil von Privatleuten war entweder auf das legale Hören beschränkt oder musste das Gesetz umgehen. Letzteres wurde mit deutscher Gründlichkeit getan, der DASD entwarf 1927 ein System für inoffizielle "unlis" Rufzeichen, vom Format EK4xx, in dem der erste Buchstaben im Suffix die Region kodierte. Der Prefix EK wurde 1929 durch D ersetzt: D4xx. Schließlich wurde 1930 vom DASD eine Regel angewandt um die als illegal erkennbaren D4xx Rufzeichen in D4xxx Rufzeichen umzuwandeln, welche von legalen schwerer unterscheidbar waren. Die Inoffiziellen versandten anonyme QSL Karten (siehe nächste Seite) and waren nicht in den Rufzeichenlisten enthalten.

Da "unlis" Operationen aus Sicherheitsgründen anonym bleiben mussten, ist die Identität vieler dieser Stationen bis heute mysteriös und ungeklärt. Dies ist der erste Versuch, deutsche "unlis" Amateurfunkstationen in der Periode 1923 bis 1933, und in einigen Fällen später, vollständig zu dokumentieren. Am 15. Mai 1933, an zunächst 34 vormalis Unlizensierte [CQ-MB 8/1933], begann das Nazi regime "lis" Liebhabersendersendergenehmigungen zu vergeben. An einigen Stellen sind biographische Informationen hinzugefügt, welche Einblicke in Wechselwirkungen zwischen dem Amateurfunk der Weimarer Republik und dem allgemeinen Geschichtsverlauf ermöglichen:

- 1) Einige, der Funkamateure wurden später Wissenschaftler und Entwickler von Schlüsseltechnologien, zum Beispiel: EK4AAL, EK4AAR, EK4ABM, EK4ACI, EK4ACZ, EK4AV, EK4CM, EK4GP, EK4VF, EK4XU, D4TBM
- 2) Einige waren in Geheimdiensttätigkeiten involviert: EK4AB: Abwehr, später BND - Organisation Gehlen; EK4KQF: BND; EK4KU: BND; EK4TH: Abwehr Agent in Mexico; EK4TY: Abwehr Agent in Argentinien; EK4XF: angeheuert vom CIA, dann jedoch inaktiv; D4OMO: angeheuert vom CIA; EK4HH(2): MfS Referatsleiter in the DDR.
- 3) Einige der Pioniere des Amateurfunks in Deutschland wurden Verfolgte des Nazi Regimes: Kc2, EK4ABK(2), EK4ACZ, EK4AG, EK4AH(1), EK4CL, EK4CM, EK4JB, EK4QV(1), EK4QY(1), EK4SAR(1), EK4YAE, D4EWV, D4FLA, D4ZGM, UN7DD
- 4) Ungefähr 6% der aktiven EK calls sind nach wie vor unidentifiziert: Gesucht: EK4AX, DA, DC, DN, DV, FG, GQ, HA, HF, HP, II, MC, MQ, NB, NI, NU, NW, NX, NZ, OJ, OR, OS, OY, QD, QM, QN, QO, RL, RP, RQ, RZ, SL, TG, UT, VO, VW, XA, XC, XG, XL, XW, XX, YA, YT, YW, YZ, ZA, ZZ

Trotz verbleibender Lücken und Ungenauigkeiten, hoffen wir, dass die vorliegende Liste nach beinahe hundert Jahren etwas Licht in ein wenig beleuchtetes Kapitel deutscher Amateurfunkgeschichte bringen kann - und vielleicht einige zu weiteren Nachforschungen anregt. Bitte senden Sie eventuelle Korrekturen und Ergänzungen an k6ee@arrl.net.

Systems of official and unofficial calls of amateur radio stations during the Weimar Republic in Germany

Official calls: Starting 1925, some exceptions were made, and permits issued to a few radio clubs, companies and educational institutions:

Ka0-Kz9	legale Versuchsstationen (ab 1925)
On 1.2.1927 the system of official call signs was changed to:
EK4AAA-EK4AEY	legale Versuchsstationen (ab 1.2.1927)
D4AAA-D4AEY	legale Versuchsstationen (ab 1.1.1929)
D4DAA-..	Heer (ab 1928)
D4KAA-..	Kavallerie (ab 1928)
D4LAA-..	Marine (ab 1928)

Unofficial calls: In addition to the official “lis” stations, “unlis” stations appeared on the bands as well. First they used fantasy calls, like UHU, BABY, MARS. As early as Oct. 1925 the first unlis calls of the format K4xx were used [J:3], for example K4LD. In 1927 unofficial (E)K4xx calls were coordinated by the German amateur radio club DASD:

EK(D)4AA-EK(D)4ZZ “unlis”

The first letter in a two letter suffix encoded geographic region [J:3]: A, C, W: Berlin; B: Brandenburg und Pommern; D: Provinz Sachsen; E: Ostpreussen; F, T: Nordmark - Hamburg, Lübeck und Schleswig-Holstein; G: Schlesien; H, M: Sachsen und Vogtland; I: Thüringen; J: Osnabrück; K: Nordhessen; L, R: Rheinland und Westfalen; N: Südhessen; O: Baden; P: Bremen; Q: Braunschweig und Hannover; (S: Saarland;) U: Bayern; V: Franken; X: Württemberg; (Y: ?) Z: Freie Stadt Danzig, nicht im Deutschen Reich.

Some calls still were “freely invented”, without adhering to the DASD coordination scheme: EK4AL, Stuttgart, EK4HL, Hamburg.

On 1/9/1930 the DASD transitioned “unlis” calls to three letter suffixes because it was too easy to tell “unlis” and “lis” stations apart [J:8]: DASD Transformation key: EK4AZ -> D4XZA (with X a random letter, sometimes changed every month).

Prefix changes: The prefix for Germany changed on 1/3/1926 from K to EK (e.g., Ky8 became EKy8), and in 1929 from “EK” to “D” (e.g., EK4ABC became D4ABC, EK4CM became D4CM). Because suffixes remained, the prefix is unimportant for identifying call holders.

DE numbers: Since most operators could not be legally licensed during the Weimar period, most active operators also had club-issued shortwave listener identifiers that at least enabled them to legally own receivers. The DASD issued DE identifiers in numerical order, starting in 1925 with DE0001 and reaching around 1932 DE1500, the identifiers play an eminent role in identifying operators. The most important source for this callbook is the “DE list”, put together by Ludwig Grünberger after WW2, which also contains calls used for transmission. Exact issuing dates: Feb.1926: DE0240; Feb.1927: DE0476; Jul.1932: DE1576; Oct.1935: DE3321; Apr.1937: DE6000; Dec.1947: DE8395 [F:29][E]

Organization of this callbook

This callbook is subdivided by different time periods between which the call sign system changed. Each time period contains separate alphabetical lists of official (“lis”) and unofficial (“unlis”) calls. For reference we added also a list of the calls EK4/D4 operators and DE listeners held after 1949. D4 and DA calls in the period from 1933-1948 are included, when known, but not alphabetically listed.

- (1) 1927-1930: 1a) EK4xxx/D4xxx – “lis”; 1b) EK4xx/D4xx – “unlis”; 1c) Foreign calls of EK/D stations,
- (2) 1930-1933: 2a) D4xxx – “lis”; 2b) D4xxx – “unlis”; 2c) Foreign calls of EK/D stations; 2d) Arbeiterempfangsdienst SWLs
- (3) 1924-1927: 3a) KA0-KZ9 – “lis”; 3b) Freestyle calls – “unlis”; 3c) Occupational forces; 3d) Official freestyle calls; 3e) First “unlis” calls Austria
- (4) After 1949: Post-WW2 calls of EK/D stations and holders of DE numbers or “unlis” DA calls issued.
- (5) References

The foreign call listings also contain unlis operators from other countries, Austria, Baltic countries, Checheslovakia, Romania, Yugoslavia.

Nomenclature

Note that the DASD coordination was imperfect, the same call was often used by different operators. If necessary, different OPs are distinguished by EK4AL(1), EK4AL(2) etc.

[] References and sources are in square brackets, they refer to entries in the Reference section

? Info from one source but conflicting with others; A likely connection, but lacking thorough confirmation

?? call holder is still unidentified

Brief biographical information can be found in the EK list, when available. For operators who started after 1930 or ended activities before 1927, the biographic information is in the D list or the pre-EK list, respectively.

Acknowledgement

This research could not have been done without the “DE Liste”, put together painstakingly by Ludwig Grünberger (1921-2010), DL3HE, DL6KQ. Two landmark publications about the German history of amateur radio inspired our research, Wolfram Körner’s book from 1963 [K] and Leo H. Jung’s series of articles, starting in the 1990ies [J]. Some valuable information was provided by Wolf Harranth (-2021), Paulina Petri from the dokufunk.org archive [D] and by Peter Brogl, DK6NP. Much of our research relied on web-accessible digitized records. Biographical dates and later calls of operators could be found in digitized callbooks uploaded to archive.org by KB9MWR. To survey calls on the air from Germany in the 1920ies, we searched sent-in operation reports published monthly in ham radio magazines of that period - the “DX Cluster” of the time. Other important sources were digitized QSL cards in the collections of K8CX, F2VX and SP9EWM, digitized membership lists of OOTC, DIG, chronicles published by DARC districts and local chapters and many other sources encountered in web searches.

By 1930 he had worked over 70 countries and was a member of the WAC club. On a 1933 QSL he spelled his call as: Yugoslavia – 7 – Ultra – Unlis. In 1939 he was the most famous YU station, and listed in [CB1939] as contact for handling QSLs to YU under cover. In 1942 he was killed in the notorious Jasenovac concentration camp (U Logoru) run by the Ustasha government. The militant and fascist revolutionary organization Ustasha ruled an “Independent State of Croatia” in German-occupied Yugoslavia from 1941- 1945, backed by Hitler and Mussolini. They committed on a large scale atrocities and genocide against ethnic serbs and all groups also under prosecution by Nazi-Germany [G][Torbarina][Jasenovac][HSV Database]

CT2AB [E]	Max Corsepius (1893-1968), Dresden Köln Horta Fayal Azores Frankfurt Eschborn Oberursel, DE1341, DJ4UN [G][E] Born in Dresden , where his father Max was docent at Technische Hochschule Dresden [Corsepius 1891], the family moved later to Köln. The father died in 1910 and at the age of 17 he took up a job with the Deutsch-Atlantische Telegraphengesellschaft (DAT) at the submarine cable station in Horta Azores. In 1916 he was detained as a prisoner of war on Terceira Island until the end of WWI. In 1926 he returned to the Horta location of DAT and became the first Technical engineer. He is listed as CT2AB in [CB1932-1939] and became very active on the air in the years 1936-1939. In May 1939 he went to Germany for vacation and was denied return to Portugal because of WWII. He worked for the German Post Office during the war years, and transferred in 1944 to Plau Mecklenburg. In 1948 he moved to West Germany [Corsepius 2013]. He got relicensed as DJ4UN before his retirement in 1960 [E].
